Course Description

“War” and “Peace” are some of the most important topics in the study of international relations. Many believe that these conditions are inextricably linked—that we truly cannot understand one without the other. This course is designed to explore classic and contemporary issues in international security through the media of film, literature, and scholarly works. The class will address the moral and material complexities of conflict, as well as the implications of war and “anti-war” for security today. Key sections of the class examine the origins of war, international terrorism, the soldier’s journey, civil-military relations, idealism and peace studies, questions of heroism and glory, and security in the post-9/11 era. This course will prompt students to examine their own assumptions about historical narratives of peace and security, and, through the use of various media, to place theories in a meaningful context.

Course Objectives

This is an advanced class. Students should have had prior coursework in the discipline or related areas of study. Educational objectives for this class include:

- to provide a strong foundation in modern studies of peace and security;
- to explore critical questions regarding the root causes of war and anti-war;
- to explore theories in international security and peace studies;
- to better understand the origins of peace and conflict through alternative pedagogies;
- and to strengthen research, writing, and analytical skills.

Required Texts

- Chris Hedges, War is a Force that Gives Us Meaning, 2002
- Timothy Corrigan, A Short Guide to Writing About Film, Ninth Edition, 2015
- Kevin Powers, The Yellow Birds, 2012

Course Requirements

Students are expected to attend class and participate actively in seminar discussions. They will complete a number of assignments, including response papers, group discussion exercises, a war and remembrance paper, a critical essay on heroism, a book review, and midterm and final examinations. Assignments will be weighted in the following manner:

Comprehensive Participation	15%	Response Papers	15%
Midterm Exam	15%	Essay on Heroism	15%
War and Remembrance Paper	10%	Take-Home Final Exam	15%
Book Review	15%

Content Warning

Many of the themes in this class deal with violence and a negative view of humanity. Film and literature content is designed for mature audiences; some may find this material uncomfortable. While I always try to forewarn students of filmic content, please consider carefully whether this is the type of course material you are prepared for, and share any concerns or questions that you may have as soon as possible.

Comprehensive Participation and Professionalism

Students are expected to attend all class sessions, prepare course material in advance, and participate actively in class discussions. Indeed, a large portion of your participation and professionalism grade will be anchored in work in class. Readings must be completed by the class session for which they are assigned. Students should be prepared to take notes during film showings and are expected to make conceptual linkages between film content, theoretical frameworks, and class readings. This evaluation is also based on student engagement in group discussions, a regular feature of this class. Students who are engaged and employ a high degree of professionalism (i.e., balancing quantity and quality of engagement) will receive high marks for this portion of the total grade (15%). Simply attending the course regularly without active participation will result in a loss of participation points. Because this class meets only one time a week, two or more absences may result in failure of the course.

Response Papers

Students will complete response papers that reflect on and critically analyze theoretical foundations, films, and readings. Typically, these papers will include a brief synopsis of a film clip viewed in class as well as a critical analysis of a topic related to class readings. Each paper should be 2-3 typed, double-spaced pages and apply careful and consistent source citation methods. Together, the response papers are worth 15% of the final grade, and more information on each assignment will be presented in class.

War and Remembrance Paper

How we remember war and peace is vital for any nation's cultural narrative. This assignment tasks you to research a war or peace memorial that you find particularly compelling, and detail the history of the memorial and the meaning that you interpret therein. You must do two things for this paper: 1) Print out a color picture of the memorial and bring it with you to class; 2) Develop a paper that examines the following themes about the memorial: What is the memorial? What is the visual signature or design of the memorial? What conflict or peace event does it commemorate? What is the history of the development of the memorial (i.e., Who proposed it? Was it controversial? Were design issues a critical factor?). Finally, what is your interpretation of the memorial in relation to theories and cases we have reviewed in class (i.e., What themes or theories does it illustrate, struggles does it unveil, etc.?). This paper should be 3-4 typed, double spaced pages, and should apply careful and consistent source citations methods. The assignment is worth 10% of the course grade.

Critical Essay on Heroism on Film

What is "heroism"? What does it mean for an actor or an action to be described as heroic? Develop a critical film essay in which you critically examine a film and its depiction of heroism. Be sure to ground your essay, in substantive terms, on themes in Allison and Goethals, Heroes, Chapter 1, "Heroes: Who They Are and What They Do," and structure the essay according to guidelines in Corrigan's Short Guide to Writing About Film, in which you examine a film and its depiction of heroism. Explore ways in which scenes do, or do not, exhibit heroism according to your definition. Your critical essay must include a thesis and supporting illustrations to develop it, as well as demonstrate that you have internalized Corrigan's interpretation of film analysis. Critical and creative applications to the topic are encouraged, but be sure to anchor your analysis in broader themes and literature from the class. One caveat: the film selected may not be one viewed in its entirety in this class. This paper should be 3-4 typed, double spaced pages, and should apply careful and consistent source citations methods. The assignment is worth 15% of the course grade.

Book Review: The Yellow Birds, by Kevin Powers (2012)

In this essay, you should critically analyze this award-winning novel and articulate its major elements. In part one of the review, you should identify what are the primary themes in the book: How would you characterize the narrative structure of the book, and what are primary illustrations? What is the point of view of the book? Next, creatively (but carefully) link themes from the novel to filmic representations, readings, and discussions from our class. What films or readings is the book similar to, or different from, and how? And finally, do you think this book would this make a good film? Why or why not? This paper should be 6-8 typed, double spaced pages, and should apply careful and consistent source citations methods. The assignment is worth 15% of the course grade.

Resources

The Writing Center

The Writing Center is available for students who wish to have experienced writers and teachers of writing assist them with all facets of the writing process. Students can schedule appointments at the Center or seek assistance on a walk-in basis. The Center is staffed with professional consultants and trained peer tutors.

The Learning Center

The Learning Center, which is located in APEX (Gault Library), offers a variety of academic support services, programs and 1:1 meetings available to all students. Popular areas of support include time management techniques, class preparation tips and test taking strategies. Students are encouraged to schedule an appointment at the APEX front desk or call x2595.

The Learning Center also coordinates accommodations for students with diagnosed disabilities. At the beginning of the semester, students should contact Amber Larson, Director of the Learning Center (ext. 2595; al Larson@wooster.edu), to make arrangements for securing appropriate accommodations. Although the Learning Center will notify professors of students with documented disabilities and the approved accommodations, it is the responsibility of the students to speak with professors during the first week of each semester. If a student does not request accommodations or does not provide documentation, faculty are under no obligation to provide accommodations.

Academic Integrity

This class will operate on a set of expectations consistent with the College's Code of Academic Integrity, The Wooster Ethic, and the Code of Social Responsibility, outlined in The Scot's Key and the Handbook of Selected College Policies (www.wooster.edu). The Codes and guidelines form an essential part of the intellectual contract between the student and the College.

Cheating in any of your academic work is a serious breach of the Code of Academic Integrity and is grounds for an "F" for the entire course. Such violations include turning in another person's work as your own, copying or paraphrasing from any source without proper citation, fabricating excuses and lying in connection with your academic work. You will be held responsible for your own actions. If you are unsure as to what is permissible, always consult with your course instructor.

Grading Scale

As stated in The College of Wooster Catalogue, letter grades are defined as:

“A range”	indicates an outstanding performance in which there has been distinguished achievement in all phases of the course;
“B range”	indicates a good performance in which there has been a high level of achievement in some phases of the course;
“C range”	indicates an adequate performance in which a basic understanding of the subject has been demonstrated;
“D range”	indicates a minimal performance in which despite recognizable deficiencies there is enough to merit credit;
“F or NC”	indicates unsatisfactory performance.

Course Expectations

1. Please read the assigned materials before class meeting; they provide the basis for class discussions.
2. Turn off all cellphones and personal electronic devices before class as a courtesy to others. If you bring a laptop computer to class, it should be used for note-taking only.
3. Papers should be submitted in hard copy. I will not accept e-mail versions of student papers unless you have talked with me in advance.
4. Late papers lose half a grade level for each day they are late.
